1. Introduction

I propose that commerce be unified in the public domain and that the Communist Party's system of election be used to select the management system. Moreover, I believe that the essence of work is the exchange of wages for labor and the fruits of labor, and to ensure freedom and fairness, I propose a uniform system of getting as much as you do and distributing the wages in the proportion of the dividends that the managers, the laborers, and the contributors divide equally. Based on the results of the foundation work. This will fundamentally solve the existing social problems.

2. Commercial public office

The root cause of the existing social problems is the Improper handling of the relationship between private interests and social interests. The coexistence of the public and private sectors is in fact contradictory. In the private economy, the party that owns the most of the total assets is the sovereign, and only the party that owns the most of the assets can interfere with the appointment of managers and the formulation of the management system. In the public economy, regardless of the proportion of assets, all the people are sovereign and have the right to Interfere with the appointment of managers and the formulation of the management system. It's clear that the private sector is unfair, Contradictions with a fair and public economy cannot coexist. Social interests are made up of the private interests of all, and the stability of social interests is supported by equal private interests. Therefore, the private economy mentioned above should be eliminated, the stability and equality of interests among people should be guaranteed, and social problems should be eradicated.

3. level by level election system

The use of the electoral system can serve as a mechanism of mutual supervision in the interests of private interests, in order to select the management system that best suits the interests of all and to employ and remove managers in the interests and wishes of all. The best assurance of the quality of the management system and the supervision of the behaviour of managers. This is not comparable to a system where individuals have equal will and ability to monitor equality of interest, and in equal capacity, because individuals are far less powerful than many, individuals cannot monitor the actions of all.

Private enterprises invest more in cities for the benefit of individuals. People leave the countryside and gather in cities for job opportunities. Land prices in cities are rising as more people are living. Private enterprises reduce their investment and reduce jobs, creating conflicts among the collectives of unemployment. Even if private firms have high-yield technology that requires less manpower, they will not hire workers to maximize personal gains. The public economy plans land and investment in a balanced manner according to the needs of all, people do not gather because of equal opportunities for jobs, and equal land prices minimize conflicts even when resources are scarce.

4. Distribution system

With regard to distribution, it is impossible for the laborers and the contributors to produce less than one person, because their role should be to divide the dividends they have earned together. With regard to the managers, it is also indispensable that what they do is to examine and direct, to deal with the contradictions between production and to be responsible for what they do. Because of their role In the production they handle, the dividends are divided equally between the laborers and the contributors, that is, if the contributors, the laborers and the managers each share their common dividends. The above is the distribution of the industries for profit by production, while the industries for profit by consumption are allocated according to the average value of the labor price of the production industries corresponding to consumption, or the total average value of the production industries, where the consumers are the Investors, and as to how much they do, they are allocated according to the workload and the amount of the investment. The freest and fairest reference takes the form of clearing the books, without any rigid requirements, and only sets the workload according to people's wishes.

5. Work qualifications

With regard to job qualifications, because complex jobs are made up of simple bases and there is no guarantee of a person's memory of complex jobs, job qualifications are based on the results of the basic jobs. However, people can always distinguish between the benefits and the disadvantages, so people choose the jobs that they are responsible for according to their cost. Take responsibility for yourself.

6. Initiative

To sum up, I advocate the commercial office and the implementation of the above Initiative work system.
